I've been doing yard restoration for the gas company side, we've been doing transmission work, and now we are doing the solar field.

The project has always been 60 percent minority participation since we started. I've also got most of the local truckers and local minority involved in the project.

People from the community see people they know working on projects, it makes them feel good. We have guys working that would otherwise probably be unemployed. Now they have a trade; they're learning a trade and getting involved in work they have never been involved with before. And I'm making sure that happens.
